New York, March 22.—In a message to the council of New York University, made public today, Chancellor Elmer Brown asks for an endowment of $250,000 for a new department of international affairs. The aim is to fit Americans to serve their country as diplomats, both at home and abroad, as consuls and consular agents, and as advisers in affairs that concern other governments besides their own. The course would probably include studies in consular work and method in international law and policy, in the history of world diplomacy and in the history of American diplomacy.

NEW YORK, March 12.—To solve the problem of traffic congestion at the most crowded street crossings, the Municipal Art Society has offered three prizes of $500, art, cuts and prints of the inteenth, sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. It was probably brought to America by the early settlers, that their children might continue their studies and learn to read, and it is alluded to by our countrymen in writings, journals and so forth dated 1708, 1716 and 1760, although scarcely any originals exist to-

Like all copies and reproductions of any one thing the editions by various makers deviated, so that we find many different examples of this book. Some of the alphabets are shown with both upper and lower case letters and printed in many styles of type; some of the hornbooks preserve the prayer, while others show the alphabet enlarged to cover the whole space, yet they all are seen to be related and bear a certain resemblance to the earliest copies. Usually the letter "A" was preceded by a cross, indicative of a pledge of faith, and in recollection that some of the earliest books of this sort appeared in the form of the cross and were connected with religious customs or the bellef that learning led to piety. From the form of the cross and were connected with religious customs or the bellef that learning led to both the alphabet and the hornbook as early as the fifteenth century and as late as the eighteenth, aithough many forms of spelling were used. This blow to a tradition dear to childhood was delivered by Cecile Hugon, lecturer in French literature to the Oxford Society for Women's Education, in a paper on the subject of fairy tales.
When the Cinderella story was turned from French into English, the translator mistook a word.

Perrault, who wrote the tale in French, described the slipper not as "soulier de verre," but as "soulier de vair." Verre and vair sound alike in French, but verre means glass, while vair means the fur of the squirrel.

Miss Hugon suggests that the slippers might have been of gray with a dainty trimming of squirrel about the top.
Otherwise, they might have been all fur top. But in no case did Cinderella receive a pair of glass slippers from her fairy godmother and drop one in the ballroom for the prince to find.
